<)tb January A PROTEST ON BEHALF OF THE PURITANS

Sir Francis Knollys hath written to the Lord Treasurer on behalf of the Puritans still in prison that he marvels how the Queen can be persuaded that she is in as much danger of the Puritans as of the Papists , for she cannot be ignorant that the Puritans are not able to change the government of the clergy but by petition , and even then the Queen could not do it but she must call a parliament for it, and no act could pass unless she give her royal assent thereto As for their seditious conduct, if the bishops or the Lord Chancellor or any of them could have proved de facto that Cartwnght and his fellow prisoners had gone about any such matter seditiously, then they had been hanged before this But the Queen must keep a form of justice as well against Puritans as any other subjects, and they tried m convenient time, whether suspected for sedition or treason or Puritanism or by whatever name it is called

AN ATTORNEY'S UNSEEMLY APPAREL

One King, an attorney in the Court of Common Pleas, that was committed to prison for his misdemeanour in raising and laying the street for the assisting of an arrest with lewd words which were likely to have bred some tumult, was brought before the Council. And because he appears before their Lordships in apparel unfit for his calling, with a gilt rapier, extreme great ruffs, and like unseemly apparel, they certify the Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas of his behaviour that he shall be dismissed of his office and place in that Court

This day the Privy Council heard a cause between the Earl of Cumberland and one Harman Langerman, factor for certain merchants of the Stoad Towns, of whom some ships and goods appertaining were taken on the seas by the Earl He claimed them as good prize going into Spain by the North Seas, being laden with prohibited goods of divers sorts for the use of the enemy Amongst these was canvas of six sundry sorts which was claimed as prize being fit for use as sails for ships of war, for
